ABSTRACT

Because American Indians are the largest minority group in South Dakota and because they are known to be among the most poverty stricken in the Nation, South Dakota annually reports on the extent to which the group depends on welfare payments. The report, prepared by the Program Analysis Section of the State Department of Social Services, analyzes the racial makeup of welfare recipients during 1 month each year, usually October. December was chosen in 1973 because it was the last month for which information was available for the adult programs, which were converted to the Federal Supplemental Security Income program in January 1974. The report consists of tables showing the ratio of Indian recipients in each program and the proportion of money expended for their grants. The programs are: Old Age Assistance, Aid to the Blind, Aid to the Disabled, Aid to Dependent Children, and Foster Care. A summary of the Indian recipient rate by program for each of the last 20 years is presented, showing the trend in welfare assistance participation. Information by county has been compiled for the reservation and nonreservation counties. The total state population, Indian population, and ratio of Indians by county according to the 1970 census is a new table for this report. In South Dakota over 80% of the Indians live on state reservations, which are: Cheyenne River, Lower Brule, Pine Ridge, Rosebud, Crow Creek, Yankton, and Sisseton (the last 2 are open reservations). SOUTH DAKOTA
INDIAN RECIPIENTS OF SOCIAL WELFARE

Because Indians are the largest minority group in South Dakota and because they are known to be among the most poverty stricken in the nation, it is of interest to know to what extent the race is dependent on welfare payments. Therefore, to prepare this report, the Program Analysis Section of the State Department of Social Services analyzes the racial makeup of the welfare recipients during one month each year, usually October. December was chosen in 1973 because it was the last month for which information was available for the adult programs, due to their conversion to the Federal Supplemental Security Income program in January 1974.

The report consists of a number of tables showing the ratio of Indian recipients in each program and the proportion of money expended for their grants. Programs included are: Old Age Assistance, Aid to the Blind, Aid to the Disabled, Aid to Dependent Children and Foster Care. A summary of the Indian recipient rate by program for each of the last 20 years is presented, showing the trend in Indian participation of welfare assistance. Information by county has been compiled for the reservation and nonreservation counties. The total state population, Indian population and ratio of Indians by county, according to the 1970 census is a new table this year.

In South Dakota over 80 percent of the Indians live on reservations located within the state. These are the Cheyenne River, Lower Brule, Pine Ridge, Rosebud, Crow Creek, Yankton and Sisseton Reservations (the last two being open reservations). A part of the Standing Rock Reservation also extends into South Dakota, but it is generally considered a North Dakota reservation since Fort Yates is its headquarters.
